

DANIEL TELLALIAN

Urban Analysis Project (UAP)

1998 Global Fellow

ORGANIZATION OVERVIEW

The primary mission of the Urban Analysis Project (UAP)(no longer operational) is to catalyze urban infrastructure development by linking community interests and real estate developers. UAP brings community vision to experienced developers by producing site analyses and real estate proposals that make the case for new investment. Specifically, UAP makes proposals for potential industrial, office, retail, and residential developments in the Los Angeles Empowerment Zone—roughly South Central and East LA. By conducting and presenting the same due diligence that real estate developers rely on, UAP hopes to shatter the perception that neglected low-income communities cannot be developed successfully. UAP believes superior market, legal, and financial analysis proves otherwise. By providing free pre-development consulting, UAP eliminates one of the barriers to community-based development.

PERSONAL BIO

Daniel Tellalian is founder and CEO of Angel City Advisors, an advisory firm that connects talent and capital to social enterprise and community voices. Daniel brings over two decades of experience in impact investing, entrepreneurship, business mentoring, financial transactions, and place-based economic development. He was a founding board member of the Center for Place-based Initiatives and the Los Angeles Food Policy Council, and sits on numerous corporate boards, investment committees, and commissions including the Los Angeles Water Quality Board. Daniel is also a licensed California attorney and CPA.

Organization/Fellow Location

Los Angeles, US

Impact Location

North America

United States

Organization Structure

Nonprofit

in