

GEORGE REYES

Teen Media Project

1995 Global Fellow

ORGANIZATION OVERVIEW

Youth in the Teen Media Program (TMP) become creative technology users by participating in media arts and leadership activities. TMP offers a sequenced, multi-year curriculum that uses artistic expression to develop new technology and creative skill. Media Foundations classes introduce youth to the digital arts and media literacy. They hone their creative voice in Video, Photo, Digital Art, Music Production or Dance Studios; and finally, build concrete professional skills in advanced Leadership Groups.

PERSONAL BIO

Born to Colombian immigrants, George Reyes graduated from Harvard University and Tisch School of the Arts at New York University, where he directed and produced numerous award-winning short films. Reyes went on to serve as director of the Teen Media Program at the Cambridge Community Art Center and director of International Programs at the New York Film Academy, and he later taught in the Communications Department at the Tecnológico de Monterrey in Mexico City. Most recently, Reyes has worked for the Sundance Film Festival, Outfest, and Sundance Institute in their International Feature Film Program, and was a 2009 Project Involve Film Independent Fellow.

Organization/Fellow Location

West Hollywood, United States

Impact Location

North America

United States

Organization Structure

Nonprofit

VISIT WEBSITE ↗

